Thursday, 25th October 2007

The UK's only dedicated Higher Education risk cover specialists, UMAL and UMSR, have announced that they are due to move into new offices at 60 Bishopsgate, London, in November.

The mutual organisation's new headquarters at Hasilwood House will bring the operational centre closer to the heart of the City. The Underground, Docklands Light Railway and the national mainline station at Liverpool Street are all minutes away.

The Hasilwood House offices have recently been the subject of an extensive refurbishment programme. The comprehensive schedule of work has resulted in a building which combines impressive Edwardian architectural features with the very best in modern business facilities.

The interior of the offices have been refurbished to a high specification and offers extensive space and natural light within an open plan and flexible layout. UM Company's new headquarters offers more space than its previous Tavistock Square site and features a boardroom able to accommodate full-scale board meetings and large member events.

Director and CEO of UMAL, Susan Wilkinson, said the move would deliver real benefits to the mutual's, their members and staff. "Hasilwood House is located close to the City and the world's leading insurance market, which makes us ideally placed maintain and develop our insurance industry relationships to the benefit of our members.” She continued, “The offices provide the state-of-the-art facilities we need to remain at the forefront of a very competitive environment.”
